DR. AMBEDKAR AND RAJARSHI CHHATRAPATI SHAHU
MAHARAJ

Dr. (Mrs.) Anjali R. Andrew
Dept. of History
Hislop College,
Nagpur

Dr. Bhimrao Ambedkar, belonging to the untouchable caste of Mahar is one of the pillars in the national stage of India, who dedicated this life to abolish the practice of caste system in the country. He helped to imbibe the spirit of self-respect among the untouchable caste of the country. He was born on 14th April, 1891 and was the 14th and youngest sibling of Ramji & Bhimabai Sagkal. His father served as a Subedar in the Indian army. Because of his father's service in the army, he was exposed to a cosmopolitan, modern, literate and progressive environment (Sadhu, 2007).

For him, the outside civil world was full of humiliation because of his caste, and was not allowed to touch the drinking water pot at school and when thirsty, the school peon poured water from top in their mouth. This humiliation and others were later described in his essays entitled "No Peon, No Water". It was during the humiliation and inhuman treatment received while travelling in a cart from Satara to Koregaon in a cart, that changed him, and made him think about the scourge of untouchability - and the division of caste system in the (Moon, 1993).

At Satara, he completed his primary and elementary schooling and matriculated in 1908 from Elphinstone High School and graduated in Economics and Political Science from Elphinstone College in the year 1912. Sahyaji Rao III, the Gaekwad ruler of Baroda bestowed a monthly scholarship of Rs. 25/- to Bhimrao, which he used to study for his master's degree at Columbia University, New York in 1915. He specialized in Economics and also wrote a thesis entitled "National Dividend of India - A Historic and Analytical Study". Hungry for knowledge he joined the Bar course at Gray's Inn, concomitantly also registered for Ph.D. at the London School of Economics. He had to leave studies and return to India because his scholarship had ended. He joined the Sydenham College, Bombay as a teacher of Political Economics, but went back to complete his higher studies in 1920. After obtaining M.Sc. and D. Sc. degrees in Economics, he also studied Economics for a short period at the Bonn University, Germany.

The period between 1917 to 1922 was historic in the lives of Dr. Ambedkar and Chhatrapati Shahu Maharaj (Rajarshi Shahu) the Raja of Kolhapur. These two laid the foundation of the first Mahar Conference in 1920. On 26th June 1874, a boy was born in the family of the Kagal Village Chief Jaisingrao Ghatge. His wife Radhabai belonged to the royal family of Muhod. The boy was named Yeswantrao, who at the age of ten, was adopted by Anandibai, the widow queen of the State of Kolhapur. This boy completed his education at
