Teaching-Learning and Evaluation

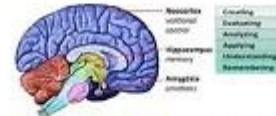

Dr. Smita Wadgaonkar

Learning Paradigm Implications

1. Focus on:
'Production of learning' and not on 'delivery of instructions'
2. Focus on:
'Why and how learners learn' not on 'what and how faculty teach'
3. Faculty to do:
'less teaching' and learners do more 'active learning'

Brain's cognitive control structures cooperate to assemble a series of concepts, concepts are supported by neuroscience research. Research indicates that learning, memory, and emotion through active learning techniques increase performance.

You can teach a student a lesson for a day; but if you can teach him to learn by creating curiosity, he will continue the learning process all his life. - Dr. P. Sen

Conference Date - 29/08/2021

Title - One day conference on India after Liberalization- 1991 to 2021

Yashoda Girls' Arts and Commerce College, Nagpur organized one day interdisciplinary conference in collaboration with Shri Binzaniya Mahavidyalaya, Nagpur on 'India after Liberalization- 1991 to 2021' on 29th August 2021 via Virtual Platform. Mr. Achyut Godbole, an Economist, was the keynote speaker and for the technical session Mr. Roshan Kishore, Editor, Hindustan Times, New Delhi was the resource person.

The one day national conference held in four sessions. The inaugural and keynote address was conducted in the first session. The president of the conference Dr. Alka Deshmukh in her introductory speech highlighted the milestones of the association and conference themes and sub-themes. The conference was inaugurated by Principal Dr Dhanraj Shete. In his inaugural address he spoke on the conference theme which is being specially highlighted by the organizers for organizing the conference during the pandemic period. He quote that the India met with an economic crisis relating to its external debt, the government was not able to make repayments on its borrowings from abroad; foreign exchange reserves, which we usually maintain to import petroleum and other important items, dropped to levels that were not sufficient for even a fortnight. The crisis was further compounded by rising prices of essential goods. All these led the government to introduce a new set of policy measures which changed the direction of our developmental strategies. In this chapter, we will look at the background of the crisis, measures that the government has adopted and their impact on various sectors of the economy. The keynote speaker Mr. Achyut Godbole in his keynote address quoted, 'I'm not against the Globalization or even the Capitalization. But today's development strategy focuses only the 10 to 15 percent people in the upper layer of the economic pyramid.' Further he said, "such a development strategy leads to severe issues like unemployment, inequality, and pollution. This can be seen from 1991 and all the political parties are a part of it. I believe that the future of the human race is going to be difficult after 50 years and development strategy will be at its root cause. The chairman of technical session was Mr. Roshan Kishore. The session was on social economical and political liberalization. The chairman of the session highlighted our previous political experience, and especially, of course, the experience of Eastern Europe and Central Asia, offers little hope that democracy can coexist with the centralized allocation of economic resources. Indeed, simple observation suggests that a market economy with private property rights is a necessary, although not sufficient, condition for the existence of a democratic political regime. And these accords fully with the political theory of liberalism, which emphasizes those private rights, both civil and economic, be protected and secure. At the same time, our previous experience also indicates that market economies are more successful than centrally planned economies not only in producing, but also in distributing, both private and collective goods. This economic experience is supported by neoclassical economic theory, which treats clearly defined and secure rights to private property as essential to a market economy. The paper reading was headed by Dr Rajendra Mudanwar, Head, Department of Political Science, Shri Shivaji Arts, Commerce and Science College, Rajura. Dr Vinod Gaikwad, Head, Department of Political Science, J B Murarka Arts, Commerce and Science College, Shegaon was the guest of Honour. The concluding program was presided by Dr Sharad Sambare, Head, Department of Political Science, Yashoda Girls Arts and Commerce College, Nagpur, who also appreciated the participants for their valuable research papers. The papers were published in 'Research Journey.' The certificates were sent to the participants' residential address along with the publisher copy. The daylong session was an interactive and the speakers answered many questions raised by the participants. The program was co-ordinated with the support of the Principal, faculty members and PhD research scholars.
